South Rebels Against 1932 Hoover Boom

Open revolt by Southern Republicans against the renomination of President Hoover broke out on the eve of Claudius H. Huston's retirement through the announcement of Colonel Horace Mann (above) that his followers had banded together to send an "uninstructed" delegation to the 1932 convention, when, presumably, Hoover will be a candidate.

FLYERS NEAR NEW RECORD

Jackson and O'Brine Only 50 Hours From Mark of Hunter Brothers.

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD, Aug. 11—The occupants of the "little orange and yellow bungalow in the clouds" as Dale Jackson and Forrest O'Brine term their endurance ship "Greater St. Louis" in their daily radio broadcasts, were putting their house in order for the setting of another world endurance record today.

At 7:11 this morning the "sky bungalow" had been perched among the clouds for three full weeks or 504 hours. Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brine, the veteran endurance pilots were thus just 50 hours from setting a new world mark to supercede the 553 hour record of the Hunter brothers of Sparta, Illinois.

To set a new record the challenging ship must stay in the air one full hour longer than the time of the former record.

It should be "sweet revenge" for the two doughty St. Louis flyers to pass the mark of the Hunter Brothers as it was the two former coal miners who surpassed the seemingly impregnable record of 420 hours set by Jackson and O'Brine in the St. Louis Robin last year.

Radio announcer Dale Jackson from station KHNSU which is officially the "Greater St. Louis" told the ground audience confidentally that all was going well in the "little orange and yellow bungalow in the clouds".

McClarren is suffering from head cuts, Racer has cuts about the head as has Whitman and Riker is suffering a broken shoulder.

The group had been in Columbus and was enroute home when the accident occurred. Columbus authorities say the driver of the car, going south, attempted to pass another car. As he pulled out of the line of traffic, he noticed another car enroute north and applied the brakes to the roadster.

The car, a Ford roadster, skidded and rolled into the ditch. The automobile turned over five times according to witnesses.

Columbus ambulances hurried to the scene and the four men were taken to Mercy hospital. All were said to be cut up considerably with McClarren in serious condition, but favorable reports were received from the hospital Monday morning.

The three men in the car with McClarren are employed by Eshelman's and their homes are in Lancaster, Pa.

The car was badly damaged.

An X-ray was taken Monday afternoon at the Berger Hospital, to determine the inuries of Mrs. Jessie Tanner, 40, of 67 W. Fifth-ave, Columbus, who was injured Sunday night, when she was knocked down by the auto of Fred Fissell of 443 E. Mound-st. The accident occurred on the Columbus-pk, north of South Bloomfield.

Fissell was driving toward home at 11 p. m. A machine coming toward him with bright lights, blinded him so that he failed to see the woman in time to avoid hitting her. She was said to have been walking south, near the center of the road when the accident happened.

Fissell brought the injured woman to the hospital, suffering from bruises and cuts. The X-ray on Monday was to determine if the pelvic bone was fractured.

Driver Finds So. Court One Rough Street

Hits Cement Mixer Then Goes Into Railroad Ravine Rushing Away.

"This is the roughest street that I have ever ridden over, and I could lick the guy that dug this street up", remarked an unknown man from the southern part of the state when he found himself tangled in the improvements on S. Court-st, Saturday evening.

About 9 p. m. the residents of this district ran from their porches when they heard a terrible crash near the railroad. At once thoughts of ten or fifteen lives lost, twenty-five injured, twenty-four of which are not expected to live, ran through the minds of many, but were astounded when they saw the unknown mystery driver racing down the street headed toward the newly poured cement. He stopped when he crashed into the large cement mixer.

He turned around and as fast as he drove down to this point, he drove back up to the railroad and again crashed into a ravine, where the railroad tracks are being lowered, and this time he "stuck."

The night watchman at Crites' Mill grew curious about the man's actions, and called the police station three times, but there must not have been anyone home, as none of the calls were responded.

With the help of the crowd which had gathered to watch the feat, his car was lifted out of the ravine and he then shot like a rocket up the street.

When workmen for A. W. Burns Constr. Co. came to work this morning they were surprised to see wheel-barrows upset, sand and gravel piles had been scattered and many other misplacements.

Damage to wires and the motor amounted to about $25 it is thought. The car was taken to the Circleville Motors garage.

An action for damage totaling $10,000 has been filed in common pleas court by Ethel E. Toole, of Ashville, against Dr. R. S. Hosler, prominent physician also of that city.

The petition states that the plaintiff broke several bones in her right arm and dislocated her wrist in attempt to crank her auto, and employed Dr. Hosler to set and endeavor to heal her arm.

The plaintiff further states that in the attempt the defendant unskillfully, negligently and unprofessionally administered unproper treatment and premitted the bones to remain out of place for twelve weeks, and it became impossible to straighten or cure, and that she lost 50 percent of the use of her right arm and is injured to the extent of $10,000.

Candidates Fall When Wind Gust Hits Hall Way

Political Cards of Hopefuls Tumble Down Corridors of Court House.

There was political upset at the Pickaway-co Courthouse Saturday which was witnessed by a number who stood in the halls of that county structure. First, Robert G. Colville came bouncing down the long marble steps which lead to the clerk's office. He was followed rapidly by Doggy Ward, candidate for sheriff, who hit every step in his descent.

As soon as Doggy hit the bottom, there was a deluge of smilling candidates, who came hurtling down the stairs, and slid half way across the marble floor of the courthouse with the Democrats in the lead.

This startling procedure of the candidates who should be on their good behavior, was caused when a sudden and rare gust of wind blew through the window of the hall and struck where the row of candidates' pictures ran around the ledge by the stairway.

The pictures in all sorts of profligate positions were retrieved and replaced on the ledge at the stairway, smugly awaiting the dawn of Tuesday morning, when their originals will be watching the returns of the primary election.

LOCKBOURNE MAN IS HELD

William Van Hoose Facing Two Charges in Franklin-Co Police Courts.

William Van Hoose, of near Lockbourne on the Ashville-rd, is facing trouble and plenty of it, according to officials of Franklin-co.

He was held in the Franklin-co bastille Sunday pending outcome of injuries of his wife, who is in St. Francis hospital with skull wounds and a broken arm, suffered, Sheriff Paul of Columbus was told, when the husband threw her into a ditch from their automobile Saturday afternoon while driving in Groveport-pk near Humbolt Country Club. The condition of Mrs. Van Hoose was improved Monday, according to hospital attaches.

The second part of the trouble, which may prove rather costly, is the fact that a 20-gallon still, two barrels of mash and one-half gallon of whiskey, said to belong to Van Hoose, were found Sunday afternoon by Franklin-co sheriff's deputies.

The raid Sunday followed the finding of two gallons of liquor in various sized containers in Van Hoose's car Saturday. Deputy Sheriff Beard said the still was located on the second floor of the house and that whiskey from the coil of the still had overflowed the pitcher and was running on the floor.

Mrs. Van Hoose is suffering from a possibly fractured skull. Her husband had been grappling with her and when they were in front of the I. A. Tipple residence he pushed her from the car. A Groveport-pk resident pursued Van Hoose and when he notified a deputy the man was arrested.

RECORD VOTE IS EXPECTED THROUGH CO.

Polls To Open at 6:30 A. M. and To Close at 6:30 P. M. Tuesday.

With Ohio's pre-primary campaign ended, political candidates today await the verdict to be rendered by Pickaway-co. and Buckeye state electors Tuesday. The polls open at 6:30 a. m. and close at 6:30 p. m.

Never before in the history of this county has a primary called for as much attention as the one this year. Fine candidates are battling for important offices. All have been working unrelentingly for the past few months. None claim victory and neither is victory conceded by electors to any candidates.

Truly, there are favorites. Everyone has a candidate he would like to see elected. But this time those candidates who will taste the fruits of victory can't be named by any one person.

The interest of Pickaway counties, nautrally, is on Pickaway-co.

Contests for each office on the Democratic ticket are found with the exception of prosecuter and coroner.

The Republicans have now named a full ticket and request that the electors of their party write in the names chosen. There is not a contest on the Republican county ticket.

Following is a complete list of Democratic county candidates in tomorrow's primary:

For Auditor;

O. M. Becket, Basil E. [illegible], Harry W. Moore, Clifford M. White.

For Sheriff;

Charles Ankrom, C. W. Neff, Marcy S. Oswald, Charles Radcliff, and John G. "Doggy" Ward, Jr.

For Representative;

Nathan C. Bohnert, Walter J. Marion and William M. Reid.

For Commissioner;

For Prosecuting Attorney;

Emmitt L. Crist.

For Recorder;

Mary G. Morris and George R. Whitehurst.

For Treasurer, (Long Term);

Robert G. Colville and Earl L. Hoffman.

For Treasurer, (Short Tearm);

Georgia E. Barr.

For Coroner;

C. E. Bowers.

The G. O. P. ticket includes;

C. C. Chappelear for representative; C. E. Dick for treasurer, (long term); Carl Porter for sheriff; A. W. Holman for coroner; John E. Walters for commissioner; Wade H. Cook for auditor.

The state ticket, too, is creating much interest. Major interest is found in the Democratic contests for the United States senatorial nomination and for state treasurer.

Democratic candidates for the senatorial toga are: former Congressman Robert J. Bulkley, Cleveland; William W. Durbin, Kenton, former chairman of the Democratic state executive committee; Charles V. Truax, Bucyrus, former state secretary of agriculture; former Congressman John McSweeney, Wooster, and George S. Myers, Cleveland, former member of the Ohio house of representatives.

Aspirants for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer include: W. V. Gosborn, Galion, former clerk of the Ohio senate; William J. Hiler, Columbus; Hanley W. Cone, Chillicothe, and Joseph T. Ferguson, Lancaster.

Entries in the Republican contest for state treasurer are: State Treasurer H. Ross Ake, Canton; former State Treasurer Harry S. Day, Sandusky, and Mrs. Pauline Buckley, Dayton, wife of former State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley.

The only remaning contest for a position on the Republican state ticket is that between Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown and Edward J. Hummel, Cincinnati, for secretary of state.

HOSPITAL NEWS

Jackie Woodruff who was injured in the accident which proved fatal to his mother Mrs. Bertha Woodruff of Urbana, was removed to his home from Berger hospital fully recovered from his injuries.

OHIO CHAMPS FACE STRONG GRID BATTLE

Ohio University, Undefeated Last Year, Have 16 Letter Men Back.

ATHENS, Aug 11—A nine game schedule calling for contests with the strongest teams in the state and neighboring states, faces Ohio University's Bobcats, champions of the Buckeye conference in 1929 and one of the few undefeated and untied elevens in the nation last fall.

Another unsullied record is beyond hope or expectation this season, but with sixteen letter men from the championship squad available, Bobcat followers expect another great team.

The season will open Sept 27, when the Bobcats entertain Wilmington College at the Ohio Stadium. The Quakers last year boasted of one of the strongest non-conference teams in Ohio and Shifty Bolen will probably have another strong team ready for the opening Bobcat encounter.

MEET BUTLER

On Oct 4, the Peden-coached squad will invade Indianapolis for a struggle with Butler College Last season the Bobcats opened their season in great style by defeating Indiana University at Bloomington. An early victory over a Hoosier foe this year might put the Ohioans in an ideal frame of mind.

West Liberty of West Virginia will come to Athens on Oct. 11 for their annual contest with the Bobcats. West Liberty has always given Ohio a hard battle and are viewed here as one of the strongest teams the Athenians will be forced to meet this year. West Liberty is a sadly under-rated team as is shown by their record for the past two years. Only twice in as many seasons have the West Virginians suffered defeat and each of these reversals was administered by Ohio University After opening with a defeat from the Bobcats last year, West Liberty recovered and went through the remainder of its schedule without another black mark.

TREK TO CLEVELAND

Western Reserve will act host to Ohio on Oct. 18, marking the renewal of an athletic relationship which ceased several years ago. The Bobcats and Redcats met every year on the gridiron up to the time Ohio joined the Buckeye conference. Since then there has been no battle between Athenian and Clevelander.

A game with Miami at Oxford on Oct. 25 marks the opening of Ohio's Buckeye conference title defense It was Miami which last year made the best bid to stop the Bobcat championship rush. Playing on a wet field before a stadium-dedication crowd at Athens, the Big Red held Ohio to a 14 to 0 victory, the lowest score the Ohioans registered the entire season.

Following the Miami game, Ohio will meet University of Cincinnati's Bearcats in the annual Homecoming game at Athens. For the past two years Ohio has won easily over the Bearcats, but in years further back, the Cincinnati elevens have been hard foes to meet.

Denison will visit Athens on Nov 8 for the third consecutive game and the Baptists will be followed by Muskingum College, last year's Ohio Conference champions whom the Bobcats defeated at New Concord, 59 to 0.

CLOSE NOV. 22

The season will close on Nov 22 when Ohio plays Ohio Wesleyan its annual game at Delaware. The Bishop-Bobcat clash holds possibilities of being one of the outstanding games in Ohio during 1930 Should this game develop into a contest deciding the B I A C. championship, Selby Field will be taxed to capacity.

The opening game with Wilmington comes during the first week of college, so Coach Don C Peden will ask his players to assemble in Athens at least two weeks ahead of the beginning of fall term.

The complete schedule follows:

Sept. 27—Wilmington, here.
Oct. 4—Butler at Indianapolis.
Oct. 11—West Liberty, here
Oct. 18—Western Reserve at Cleveland.
Oct. 25—Miami at Oxford.
Nov. 1—Cincinnati, here (homecoming).
Nov. 8—Denison, here.
Nov. 15—Muskingum, here.
Nov. 22—Ohio Wesleyan, at Delaware.

WAS MISERABLE UNTIL KONJOLA RELIEVED HIM

Another Victory Over Stubborn Case That Had Resisted Every Medicine Tried.

MR. MILO GUMBERT.

Many of the victories scored by Konjola are so remarkable that they might challenge belief were the actual facts not known and verified Take, for instance, the experience of Mr. Milo Gumbert, 723 Marshall Avenue, Youngstown Ohio, who declares:

"I suffered from stomach and kidney troubles, and was most miserable Food soured in my stomach, and I had headaches and dizzy spells Nothing I tried helped me and I was discouraged But Konjola triumphed where other treatments failed My appetite is fine headaches, backache, and dizzy spells are gone. My kidneys are normal and I feel like a different man Konjola certainly proved to be a master medicine in my case

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve deadening drugs, no heart depressing chemicals It needs no such ingredients It is powerful in the ills of the aged, yet may be given to the infant

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

Theatres

AT THE CLIFTONA

Blonde Alice White and smiling Jack Mulhall make comedy and drama of the movies, the stars, and Hollywood in their new First National picture, "Show Girl in Hollywood," which opened last night at the Cliftona theatre.

Alice and Jack, if we can believe their screen story, find the film city a place where one can win fame and fortune in a hurry, if one doesn't throw a fit of temperament, or tie up with the wrong people. In unrelling their adventures on the Pacific coast's White Way, they showed us a most amusing Hollywood. A place we would like to see before we die. A region where heartbreaks and dillusion lie right outside the door to renown. A city where praise and criticism come in equal doses.

"Show Girl in Hollywood" is a sequel to "Show Girl," an earlier picture starring Miss White, and written by the same man, J. P. McEvoy. Dixie Dugan, a Broadway chorine, comes to Hollywood with a supposed contract from a director. The director is fired and Dixie is out of a job and broke But she works hard and gets a chance to make good.

There are many interesting and novel features to the picture. Much of the action was photographed at the First National Studio and other famous places in Hollywood.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

"Ladies Must Play," the latest Columbia production presented at the Metropolitan theatre, has all the elements that go to make up a popular photoplay.

It has an abundance of light comedy and brilliant dialogue, smartly gowned women and well groomed men, a touch of melodrama and an excellent cast of screen favorites. The story is enacted against a background of New York's and Newport's smart set.

Briefly the story tells of a stenographer whose ambition is to marry a millionair. Her employer undertakes to introduce the girl to several wealthy friends The girl meets with great success in her venture, only to discover that when she can get what she wants, it is not what she wants after all.

Dorothy Sebastian, in the role of a matrimonally ambitious stenographer ably demonstrates that she has great potentialities as a comedienne, and Neil Hamilton as a wholly likable and utterly irresponsible society beau brummel, gives an enjoyable and sympathetic performance.

There are many excellent performances given by the supporting cast.

AT THE GRAND

Dolores Costello is truly a cinematic globe trotter! During her short and brilliant career as a screen star she has been in many parts of the world (in pictures) and now, for the first time, she invades Russia and the desolate stretches of Siberia. Her latest Warner Bros. all-talking Vitaphone production, "Hearts in Exile," now at the Grand Theater, is a dramatic tale of love and political intrigue in Russia under the regime of Czar Nicholas, the last of the Romanoffs.

Brains and Beauty

It is significant that in selecting stories for Miss Costello, Warner Bros. do not adhere to a particular type of story or characterization—a splendid tribute to her dramatic ability. For, whatever the role Dolores is called upon to play, her interpretations are always interesting and superbly carried out. Her exquisite beauty is a decided asset, naturally; but without genuine talent, beauty brings but fleeting fame.

PACE TELLS AS BROOKLYN FALLS TWICE

St. Louis Cards Grab Two Encounters and So Do Cards; Margin One Game.

NEW YORK, Aug 11—The pace that kills-whether its under the white lights of Broadway or on the sun-baked baseball diamonds—in the end always does its Rin-Tin-Tin. And its victim today is the Brooklyn Robins.

Worn down to a mere bundle of nerves and tangled in a ruinous batting slum, the Robins faced another crisis in their desperate fight to keep the National league leadership. As a matter of fact all of the flock players are physically 'struck out' and three of them were so tired in Sunday's twin bill, which St. Louis grabbed 8 to 2 and 4 to 0, they could not get up enough ambition to run down to first base and were thrown out after they loafed down the line. The double loss dropped the Dodgers to a single game advantage over the Chicago Cubs. The Robins could gather only seven hits off Burleigh Grimes in the opener and Hallahan eased them up sharply in the tea timer with five measly safeties. He fanned 12 of the birds.

Fancy flinging by Charlie Root and Pat Malone, linked with Hack Wilson's bludgeon won twice for the Cubs over Boston, 8-0 and 11-1. Root humbled the Braves with three hits in the shutout and Wilson nitched his homers Nos. 37 and 38. In the evening debacle Malone permitted only five hits.

Babe Ruth poled homer No. 42 and the Yanks got 15 other blasts and won 14 to 11 over the St Louis Browns.

Earl Whitehill won his ninth in a row for the climbing Tigers, holding Boston to six bingles and Detroit snared it 4 to 2

Even the tepees were bowled over and every single Indian bit the dust as the Senators sacked Cleveland, 18 to 6. In the eighth inning came the climax as Washington avalanched 11 counters.

The Phillies spanked the Cincinnati Reds soundly by taking a double-header, 18 to 0 and 4 to 3. Collins scored in the night cap in hurling duel with Rixey by spacing the hits he allowed.

Other clubs were idle.

LONDON, Aug. 11 — Afridi tribesman, part of the fierce army of 10,000 Afghan warriors hovering outside of Perhawar, launched an attack on the military garrison southeast of Parachinar on the northwest frontier today, according to dispatches to the London evening newspaper.

The raiders were repulsed by a detachment of the India militia. The extent of causualities is not known.

ATTENTION REPUBLICANS!

We note with surprise an article in the issue of Saturday, Aug. 9th, of your paper that the Pickaway County Republican Executive Committee had endorsed Mr. L. G. Silbaugh for State Central Committeeman in view of the fact that their chairman, Mr. Barton Walters, attended a meeting at Lancaster where Harry Weaver was approved for the place.

At a later conference with Mr. Walters in his office here he made the statement that he and Mr. Silbaugh were not only related but had some legal matter between them and for that reason he would not take an active part in behalf of either candidate.

Republican leaders throughout the Eleventh Congressional district have always abided by the decision of the majority regarding matters of this kind and as this is the first break of this arrangement we regret that our candidate, Mr. Harry Weaver, should have any opposition whatsoever from Pickaway County.

Mr. Weaver has been for years one of the most active Republican leaders of our county and at present is serving the Lincoln Republican Club as its president.

Mr. Weaver made Circleville several years ago selling food products to the retail grocery trade and is now one of the owners of the City Sales Agency, a distributing agency for several Ohio mines featuring "Burn Ohio Coal" He also owns and operates a small fruit and poultry farm near Lancaster.

We recommend Harry Weaver very highly to the Republican voters of Pickaway County because of his work in behalf of our party.

Chairman.

ASHVILLE 9 NEARS LEAD

Crash Through Lithopolis For 15-4 Victory; New Albany Is Next Goal.

Ashville's fast stepping Suburban league ball club ran roughshod over Lithopolis at the latter village Sunday to gain a tie for second place in the league by a 15-4 victory. Showing strength probably not matched by any club in the loop, the Ashvilleites went out and pounded out enough hits to give Bud Costlow, Ashville moundsmen enough runs to win three ball games

Lithopolis started in the lead grabbing a marker in the first and coming back in the third with two more. Ashville scored one in the second and five in the fourth to go into the lead Lithopolis' last run crossed the plate in the fourth and from then on it was all Ashville

Three runs tallied in the seventh and six more crossed the rubber in the eighth.

Costlow gave only seven hits, the greater portion coming in the early frames before he warmed up to the occasion He had himself in trouble several times by walking five men but fanned five to overcome this handicap.

Art Beatty, Darbyville centerfielder on the Ashville outfit crashed out four hits during the afternoon, one a triple Chaud Pettibone, short fielder, socked a home run.

Ashville is now pointing to New Albany, league-leaders, who have only a slight margin over the Pickaway countians.

MARIETTA, O, Aug. 11—Three men are held here today in Washington-co jail pending an investigation into the murder of John Conrath, 77-year-old hermit, who was found dead on his sheep farm in the Cat's Creek hills, north of Marietta, Saturday

The men are Henry Conrath, 70, brother of the slain man, Dillon Hall and William Stewart. Hall and Stewart were arrested Saturday midnight Both are 21 years old.

Vote for Robt. G. Colville for Treasurer of Pickaway County, and you will have a born and bred Democrat, a son of the late Dr. G. H. Colville of Circleville, who was one of the old school of true Jeffersonian Democracy and one of the staunch Democrats in Pickaway County.

Robt. G. Colville, following in the footsteps of his father, has always stood for Democratic Principles of the cleanest type, and always stood by the party. After getting his early education in the Circleville Schools and spending three years at Wooster College, he entered the Banking Business and stayed five years with the Second National Bank as bookkeeper. Twenty years ago he organized the Jeffries & Colville Dept. Store, and now at the age of 46 years, is asking the Democratic voters of Pickaway County to give him the honor of Treasurer of Pickaway County. If you think him capable and worthy

If nominated and elected as Sheriff of Pickaway County I assure you that the same faithful service will be rendered as given the United States during the World War when 18 of my 22 months were served overseas on the front with the Rainbow Division.

BYRD AND THE POLAR EXPEDITIONS

CHAPTER XVII

Preparations for the Antarctic Expedition Now Have The Right-Of-Way

THE America to Ver-sur-Mer crossing was completed early in June 1927. By the end of that month the newspapers of both Europe and the United States were full of preliminary announcements of the vastly larger project. Most of these were pretty far from the truth. It was announced that Byrd proposed to make the entire flight by air, and for a while great space was given over to speculations as to what type of plane would be used. It was announced that the expedition would start within 2 months, certainly not later than the coming autumn. Byrd himself never had shown any inclination to rush headlong into reskless ventures; but the public seemed determined to get him off on his new and greatest one with no preparations at all. And perhaps Byrd's own preoccupation with the project justified this impulsive desire. He was so intent upon it that upon his return from France he refused countless invitations to visit cities all over the country and receive additional honors.

"Too busy preparing for the Antarctic expedition," he announced with an appreciation that was no less great because it was succinctly phrased.

Small wonder that onlookers felt that such absorption must mean a swift beginning. Some were so sure of this that they set the month, the following October, and then the day, the twentieth But as early as in July, Byrd had emphasized that it would be impossible for him then or in the near future to fix the time. And then, for the first time, he tried to give some indication of the scope of his plans, pointing out that the flight to the South Pole would be of virtually no value. What he hoped to do, he said, was to gather information which would be of use to all scientists.

This declaration, however, failed to end the rumors. They did not stop until in August when Byrd definitely announced that the magnitude of his undertaking was such that he could not complete his preparations until the following year. At a rough guess, he announced, he would get his party, with its supplies and equipment, away from the United States some time in the autumn of 1928.

Admittedly, he was delaying long in his attempt to conquer the South Pole by air. "But when I do start," he said, "I hope it will be a success in every sense of the word."

Coincidentally with this announcement he quashed public gossip which was endeavoring to make his expedition a challenge to another South Pole exploration venture that was being promoted by the English Sir George Wilkins, who had also been in the Far North while the Byrd unit was occupied there. He pointed out that the plans and purposes of the two groups were so different that there could be no possible suggestion of rivalry; and after much effort he managed to drive this belief home by calling attention to the fact that the two forces would be operating in entirely different areas.

That bothersome and doubtless slightly embarrassing circumstance cleared away, Commander Byrd set about to formulate a program. Before he did anything else, he had to have a detailed outline of what he proposed to attempt in the Antarctic. Only with this in his possession would he be able to settle upon the length of time he would need to stay in the Far South. And only after he decided this could he settle upon the provisions and equipment that would be necessary for a large personnel.

The preliminary announcements of his program had no more than been given out than it became apparent that the Commander was projecting an undertaking of such magnitude that it would surpass all previous Polar expeditions, either North or South.

The country was thinking of little but the actual flight by airplane to the Pole and back from whatever base Byrd decided upon. His first statement made it clear that he considered that to be of comparatively little consequence.

"The Pole" he said bluntly "is the least of our goals."

Far and away ahead of the Pole in consequence, he pointed out, were the scientific investigations which he proposed to make, and for which he was already recruiting such a corps of experts as no other similar expedition had ever had.

One of his chief hopes was to establish whether the vast Antarctic continent, measuring some 2,000,000 miles, was a single unit or was divided by water. If it was so divided he hoped to locate these straits, or some of them. Another problem, which he would endeavor to solve for scientists who had been puzzling over it for years, was whether Antarctica, still in a glacial period, ever had been inhabited by man or ever been used as a passageway between the Old and the New Worlds by migrating people. He meant, moreover, to attempt to discover the relationship, if any, between the southward extending Andes Mountains of South America and the tall ranges which were known to exist on the Polar continent still farther south. For the benefit of scientists already enormously interested, he announced specifically that he proposed, if possible, to investigate:

(1) The potential gradient of the atmosphere, making a record of a year or longer with equipment furnished by the Carnegie Institute.

(2) Auroral phenomena.

(3) Earth radiation, and thermometric conditions.

(4) Sky radiation.

(5) Radio activity of snow, ice and such geological specimens as might be found.

(6) Penetrating radiation.

(7) Ionic content of the atmosphere.

(8) Conductively of the atmosphere.

(9) Glaciology, crystallographic structure of the ice.

(10) Correlation of atmospheric humidity with atmospheric electricity.

(11) Gravimetric determinations.

(12) Oceanography and hydrography. In this connection he meant to make a Plankton collection, obtain records of marine microorganic photo-microscopy, and make tests for depth, temperature, salinity and color of ocean bottom where ever possibly.

(13) Magnetic phenomena, making records through a period of a year or more of total and horizontal intensity and declination for the Carnegie Institute.

(14) Dip circle determinations of F. H. and D. from as many field stations as possible.

(15) Directivity of static.

(16) Fading of radio signals.

(17) Kenally (heavy side layer) determinations.

(18) Echo signaling and circumterrestrial measurements.

(19) Temperatures.

(20) Wind velocities.

(21) Barometric phenomena.

(22) Upper strata work.

(23) Humidity.

(24) Pathological reactions of personnel to various climatic and dietetic conditions. General records on personnel under above conditions.

In addition he proposed:

(a) Detailed mapping of the main base and its environs

(b) Exploration and mapping of as much of the coastland of King Edward VII Land as is possible by whatever means of transportation are available.

(c) Mapping and study of mountains with reference to structure, trend, materials, with a view to determining any possible relationship to those in New Zealand.

(d) Collecting of rock specimens in situ, both for later petrographic study and for study by the geophysical laboratory at Washington, D. C.

(e) Exhaustive search for fossils, either from rocks in situ or from the glacial drift—these will indicate what the past geological history and climate of Antarctica has been.

(f) Mapping of any new routes or places visited by members of the expedition.

(g) Study of glaciers from the geological viewpoint especially by way of comparison and contrast with those studied in Greenland.

(h) Collection of natural history specimens that can be preserved by salting, to be later studied and mounted by such museums or institutions as may be the recipients of such collections.

PAYING THE WAR PIPER

The Veterans Administration at Washington is mighty busy these days. In fact, it is swamped. Legislation enacted in the last session is responsible.

Some of the logical results seem to have been overlooked in that legislation. At least, little or nothing was said about them. The new law provides that in filing claims for disability it is not necessary for war veterans to prove that such disability is due to military service. A moderate number of applicants were expected under this liberal rule. But to the new claims are now added more than 600,000 old claims of World War veterans which were formerly refused because the claimants could not prove that their disablement originated in service. And to this horde are added about 120,000 new claims by Spanish War veterans for increased pension under recent legislation.

It is estimated that the Veterans Administration, which has absorbed the Veterans Bureau and National Soldiers Home, will expend $1,000,000,000 during the present fiscal year.

This may be alright. The rightness or wrongness is not being discussed. It is impossible, however, not to speculate on the outlook. It looks as if the nation, after all the pains taken to aviod it during the World War and afterward, is in for another Civil War aftermath of pensions on a far vaster scale.

INTEGRITY

Stuart Chase has some rather important things to say in the August Harper's on "The Luxury of Integrity." We have lost, he thinks, to a large extent the power to be independent.

There is the "yes man" who dares not express his own thoughts, dares scarcely think them—unless they coincide exactly with the thoughts of his chief.

There is the man who is engaged in making commodities which the maker knows to be evil, shoddy adulterated and a rank imposition upon the public. Deep down inside, the continued outrage to his instinct of workmanship troubles him considerably. It is contrary to the whole history of mankind to waste good hours of labor on worthless or evil products."

There is the salesman who has to sell inferior products. "He has to lie blatantly, loudly and continually. He has to tell the world that bad products are good." Behind that blatant surface, thinks Mr. Chase, there is a man who "sometimes wishes to God he could earn his living doing something he believes in."

There is the canvasser who tries to bully a woman into buying a book by asking if she doesn't "care enough about the future of her children to pay five dollars." He has lost his integrity. She, if she falls for that guff, has lost hers.

There is the seller who must, in the interest of sales, dine and wine his prospects. "To shower upon stranges and upon people who never could be one's friends all the earnests of comradship is to debase rare metal."

These are but a few of those he names who have found integrity a luxury for which they are unable to pay the price. Only a greater economic security he thinks can bring release. That security, apparently, will not be attained by working ever harder to attain the satisfaction of ever increasing desires, but by a knowledge of the principles which underlie comfortable and ordered living.

INVESTMENT MONEY

It is a commonplace remark that there is plenty of money in the country. What is being done with it? There is a great deal put into circulation which has not registered in stock exchange transactions or other speculation and investment.

The answer is now given. There has been an astonishing amount of new financing done by corporations. So far this year the total is almost as great as it was during the boom months of last year. $3,900,000,000 against $4,150,000,000.

That was not all new capital because there was considerable refunding; but a great deal of it issues. It means many big bonds issues. It means immense sums invested in new bonds, also a considerable amount invested in new stocks.

It would have been better if more of it had been invested in new construction. But that development should come soon.

So far nobody seems to have thought of blaming the drouth on Russian emissaries.

"The SEA BRIDE"

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

FAITH KILCUP marries Captain Noll Wing, skipper of the Whaler, "Sally Sims," a man much older than herself. After a wedding supper aboard the boat, Faith and Noll sail away. Among the crew are Dan'l Tobey, second mate, who has loved Faith since childhood, and Roy, Faith's brother. There is little privacy, but Faith is content with Noll's love. Reminiscing, Faith recalls her childhood admiration for Noll's strength which led to love.

CHAPTER IV

WHEN Noll came down into the cabin Faith was waiting for him. She had put on a dressing-gown, a warm and woolly thing that she and Bess had made of a heavy blanket, to protect her against the chill winds of the sea. Her braids were upon her shoulders, her hair parted evenly above her broad brow. Her eyes were steady and sweet and calm. Noll, studying her while his heart leaped, saw, where the dressing-gown parted at her throat, a touch of white, a spray of broidered blossoms which Faith herself had made, with every stitch a world of hope and dreams.

Faith lifted her eyes and came closer to him. He took her roughly in his arms, and she lifted one arm and threw it around his thick neck and drew his face down.

"Ah, Noll," she whispered proudly.

Faith Wing fitted easily into the life aboard the "Sally Sims," as the whaler worked eastward before starting on the long southerly slant that would bring her at last to her true hunting-grounds. The mates saw Faith daily as a pleasant figure in the life of the cabin; the boat-steerers and the seamen and greenies caught glimpses of her, now and then, when she sat on deck with sewing, or a book, or with idle hands and thoughtful eyes. Faith, on her part, studied the men about her, and watched over Noll, and gave herself to the task of being a good wife and helpmate to him.

The first weeks of the cruise were arduous ones, as they are apt to be on a whaler, for of the whole crew more than half were green hands recruited from the gutter, the farms, the slums—weak men in many cases, rotted by wrong living; slack-muscled, [illegible], weak men who must be made strong, for there is no place for weakness in a whaler's crew.

It was the task of the mates to make these weaklings into men. The greenies must learn the rigging; [illegible] must learn their duties [illegible] each command, they must be drilled to their parts in the boats and prepared for the hunts that were to come. Your novice at sea has never an easy time [illegible] he learns in a hard school, [illegible] apt to be especially [illegible] on a whaler. While [illegible] of the officers differ according to the habit of the [illegible], they were never gentle. [illegible] Wing watched over all [illegible] a hand here and there. And Faith, [illegible] in the background, saw a new Noll, saw in [illegible] of the officers a man she had [illegible].

Noll was the master, the commander. When his voice bellowed along the decks even the greenest man leaped and desperately strove [illegible] effort to obey. Noll was the dominant man and Faith was [illegible] afraid of him and his [illegible] tone. She loved being afraid of him.

There were four officers aboard the "Sally Sims." These four, with [illegible] capacity of ship's boy, [illegible] with Noll and Faith in the main cabin. They were Faith's family. Big Henry Ham, the mate, was a man of slow wit but quick fist; a man with a gift of stubbornness that passed for mastery. The men of his watch and especially the men of his boat, feared him acutely. He taught them this fear in the first week of the cruise by the simple teachings of blows. Thereafter he relaxed this chastisement, but held a clenched fist always over their cowering heads. He had what passed for a philosophy of life to justify this.

Dan'l Tobey, the second mate, was a man of another sort. Faith was startled and somewhat amused to find what a difference there was between Dan'l afloat and Dan'l ashore. Ashore, he was a round-faced, freckled, sandy-haired boy with no guile in him, an impetuous, somewhat helpless and inarticulate boy. Afloat, he was a man; reticent, speaking little, speaking to the point when he spoke at all. Shrewd, reading the character of his men, playing upon them as a musician plays upon his instruments.

Of the five men in his boat, not one but might have whipped him in a stand-up fight. Nevertheless, he ruled them. This one he dominated by cutting and sarcastic words that left the man abashed and helpless; that one he flattered; another he joked into quick obedience.

Dan'l had, Faith decided, more mental ability than any man aboard—short of her Noll. He ruled by his wits, and this the more surprised her because she had always thought Dan'l more than a little stupid. She watched the unfolding of the new Dan'l with keener and keener interest as the weeks dragged by.

James Tichel, the third mate, was a thin little old man, given to occasional bursts of tigerish rage in which he was the match for any man aboard. In his second week he took the biggest man in his boat and beat him into a helpless, clucking wreck of brawn. Thereafter there was no need for him to strike a second time.

Willis Cox was fourth mate. He was a youngster; this his first cruise in the cabin. He had been promoted from the fo'c'sle by Noll Wing on Noll's last voyage. By the same token, he [illegible] Noll as a demigod with the [illegible] of youth.

All these men had been changed, in subtle ways, by their coming to sea. Faith, during the first weeks, was profoundly puzzled and interested by this transformation. There was a new strength in all of them which she marked and admired. At the same time there were manifestations over which she was disquieted.

Noll Wing—her Noll—had changed with the rest. He had changed not only in [illegible] bearing, but in his relations with her. She was troubled from the very beginning, by these changes, and she was troubled [illegible] own reactions to them.

The pitiless intimacies of their life together in the cabin of the "Sally Sims" were hard for Faith. They shared two small rooms and Noll must be up and down at all hours of day and night when the weather was bad or the business of whaling engrossed him. Faith, without being vain, had that reverence and respect for herself which goes by the name of modesty. Her body was as sacred to her as her soul. The necessity that they were under of dressing and undressing in a tiny room not eight feet long was a perpetual torment to her.

She had been [illegible] when she married, prepared for disillusionment. Faith was not a child; she was a woman. She had the wisdom to know that no man is a heroic figure in a nightshirt. But she was not prepared to discover that Noll, who walked among men as a master, could fret at his wife like a nervous woman.

This fretfulness manifested itself more than once in the early stages of the voyage. For Noll was growing old, and growing old a little before his time because he spent his life too freely. He was, at times, as querulous as a complaining old man. Because he was apt to be profane in these moods, Faith tried to tell herself that they were the stormy outbreaks of a strong man. But she knew better. When Noll, after they lost their second whale, growled to her:

"Damn Tichel! The man's losing his pith. You'd think a man like him could strike a whale and not let it get away."

Faith knew this was no just accusation against Tichel but an out-and-out whine of irritability.

She knew this, but would not admit it, even in her thoughts.

Another matter troubled her. Noll Wing was a drinker. She had always known that. It was a part of his strength, she thought, to be able to drink strong liquor as a man should. But aboard ship she found that he drank constantly, that there was always the sickly-sweet smell of alcohol about him. And at times he drank to stupefaction, and slept, loglike, while Faith lay wide-eyed and ashamed for him in the bunk below his. She was sorry, but because she trusted in Noll's strength and wisdom, she made no attempt to interfere.

More than once, when Noll fretted at her while others were about, she saw Dan'l Tobey's eyes upon her, and at such times she took care to look serene and proud. Dan'l must not so much as guess it if Noll should ever make her unhappy.

But—Noll make her unhappy? The very thought was absurd. He was her Noll; she was his. When they were wedded she had given herself to him, and taken him as a part of herself, utterly and without reservation. He might fail her high expectations in little things, she might fail him. But for all that they were one, one body and soul so long as they both should live.

She was as loyal to him, even in her thoughts, as to herself. For this was Faith, she was Noll's forever.

She thought that what she felt was hidden, but Dan'l Tobey had eyes to see. And now and then when in crafty ways he led big Noll to act unworthily before her he watched for the shadow that crossed her face, and smiled in his own sly soul.

There was, in Dan'l Tobey's boat, a little man named Mauger. It was he whom Dan'l ruled by a superior tongue, deriding the man and scorching him with jests that made Mauger crimson with shame for himself. Mauger was a greenie; he was a product of the worst conditions of the city. He was little and shrunken and thin, and his shoulders curled forward as though to hug and shelter his weak chest. Nevertheless, there was a ratlike spirit in the man, and a ratlike gleam in his black, little eyes. He was one of those men who inspire dislike even when they strive to win the liking of their fellows. The very fo'c'sle hated him.

It was through Mauger that the first open clash between Cap'n Wing and Faith, his wife, was brought to pass.

Preventable Accidents Are a Growing Menace

—Because Safety First Is Ignored

More Persons Were Injured Last Year by Home Falls Than by Automobiles, Even with the Streets Full of Children, Authority Asserts

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE are all too many accidents these days. The great life insurance companies, the health departments of the great cities, the newspapers, all attest to the increasing frequency of fatal and non-fatal accidents.

One of the largest life insurance companies in the country heads one of its advertisements with the caption, "Help the Healthy." It shows the startling increase in accidents among our boys and girls under the age of fifteen years.

Twenty thousand children under 15 years old were killed last year. Nearly 30 per cent of these deaths were caused by automobiles. Drownings, burns, the careless use of fire arms, falls and other causes were grouped in the order named.

Eighty thousand persons fifteen years old and over also were killed last year. Accidents are sixth on the list of causes of deaths for persons of all ages. Accidents are first on the list for children from five to fifteen years of age.

Most of these future citizens of the country are healthy, fun loving, daring boys and girls, ready to take any chance. They must be taught reasonable caution in earliest childhood. They must learn the rules of self preservation, so that they can protect themselves from dangers greater than disease.

Then there is another class of accidents even more common. Those are the non-fatal injuries received in the home. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company recently announced that twenty-two visiting nurses' associations had reported that out of 6,585 non-fatal accidental injuries treated by them last year 46 per cent occurred while the victims were occupied in domestic pursuits, 45 per cent in public places and only 9 per cent at work.

More persons were injured non-fatally by home falls than by automobile accidents. The record gives the ratio as 1,424 to 1,342.

More and more playgrounds are needed in the big cities and towns to keep the children off the streets, where the majority of fatal accidents occur. We need all the parks and all the playgrounds possible for the health of growing children.

People at home should think more of the dangers of rickety stepladders, chairs and rugs so easily tripped over. We are always hurrying these days, indoors and out. Teach the children to be careful and to observe "Safety First."

Be on the lookout for dangers yourself. Think before you step out. Observe the traffic regulations in your town. Don't be a "jay walker." New York City has inaugurated new traffic regulations for pedestrians because people must be saved in spite of themselves.

It is about time that people stopped to think and act for safety's sake.

Hinson-M'Ghee Marriage Solemnized At Bride's Home In Walnut Township

The marriage of Miss Florence Marie Hinson, daughter of Mr. Frank Hinson of Walnut-twp, to Mr. George C. McGhee, son of H. G. McGhee of Williamsport took place Saturday, August 9, at 12 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father.

A program of piano music preceded the ceremony. Miss Laura McGhee, sister of the bride-groom, sang "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," and "I Love You Truly."

The first strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss McGhee, announced the coming of the bridal party. The bride and maid-of-honor, Miss Elizabeth Weaver of Ashville, desended the stairs together. At the foot of the stairs, they were met by the bride's father who escorted her to the altar, which was improvised from palms, ferns and baskets of gladioli, in the spacious living room.

The bride-groom and best man, his brother Mr. Ulin McGhee, were waiting at the altar.

The Rev. W H Bade, pastor of the Calvary Evangelical church of Cedar Hill, performed the impressive ring ceremony.

Immediately, following the ceremony, Miss McGhee at the piano played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, during the congratulations of the guests

The charming bride wore a sleeveless gown of white georgette, fashioned with a fitted bodice, extending to points in the skirt. The flared skirt fell in folds, ankle length.

A large cape collar, falling over the arms, was edged with wide French lace. Her slippers were white kid. In her hair, the bride wore a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of Joanna Hill roses, scabosia and baby's breath. Her only ornament was a strand of crystals and pearls.

The maid-of-honor was attired in a beautiful gown of pink chiffon, made along the same lines as that of the bride, with flesh colored hose and slippers. Her arm bouquet was of pink roses and shasta daisies.

The wedding breakfast was served to the guests in the dining room. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, shasta daisies, scabosia and ferns. Those seated at this table were the bride and bride-groom, Miss Elizabeth Weaver, Mr. Ulin McGhee, Miss Laura McGhee, Mr. H. G. McGhee father of the bride-groom, and Mr. Frank Hinson, father of the bride, and Miss Lida Hinson, aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kibby, the bride-groom's uncle and aunt, the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Bade.

The remaining guests were seated at small tables, which were centered with pink roses and scabosia.

The couple left on a wedding trip in the east. For traveling, the bride wore a fall ensemble of blue and tan travel crepe, with matching accessories.

Upon their return, they will be at home with the bride's father and Mrs. McGhee will continue teaching in the Walnut-twp centralized school in September.

The bride-groom is associated in business with the Union Central Life Insurance Co, of Cincinnati, in Pickaway and Fayette counties

Mrs. McGhee is a graduate of Walnut-twp high school and the Pickaway County Normal School. She also attended Ohio State University. Mr McGhee is a graduate of the Atlanta high school, and graduated from the University of Louisiana, and received his master's degree from Columbia University, in New York.

Guests at the wedding were Mr. H. G. McGhee, Mr. and Mrs Daniel B. Metzger, Mr. and Mrs Frank Kibby, Mr. and Mrs. Harry McGhee Dr. Rex McGee, Mr. Ulin McGhee, Miss Laura McGhee, Mrs. Rebecca Hott, all of Williamsport, Mrs. F.
